

“A proud addition to the downtown area” . . .

Paul Hrakso

One... two... three... dig! The dignitaries at last Friday's sod-turning ceremony looked like they could dig the foundation for the six-storey downtown library all by themselves. From left to right are: Vice-Rector, Services, J. Charles Giguère; Board of Governors Chairman P. André Gervais; Chancellor Alan B. Gold; Capital Campaign Chairman William W. Stinson; Québec Higher Education and Science Minister Claude Ryan; and Rector and Vice-Chancellor Patrick Kenniff.

Research contracts up 27.4% over last year – Senate

by Barbara Verity

Although Concordia has made significant gains in research funding, the future is not very promising, Cooper Langford, Associate Vice-Rector, Research, told Senate at last Friday's meeting. Rector and Vice-Chancellor Patrick Kenniff said, however, that the University will act quickly to deal with the problems.

A report by Audrey Williams, Director of Research Services, was submitted to Senate, showing that 1987-88 funding from the private sector to Concordia increased 18% over the previous year.

Furthermore, both federal and provincial government funding has increased significantly. Last year, Concordia's share of provincial funding had decreased, but the University seems to have recovered the loss and increased by 19%.

The report also showed that total University funding for the past year has shown a 13% increase over the previous year and that research contracts have increased by at least 27.4% over the previous year.

The Faculty of Engineering and Computer Science accounts for approximately 54.8% of total University funding; the Arts and Science Faculty, 37.8%; and the Commerce and Administration Faculty approximately 4.9%.

This is “some very good news,” Langford commented, pointing particularly to the increase in external funding, the number of contracts and private sector funding.

However, these statistics carry warning signals. Langford said Action Structurantes and FCAR grants played a significant role in the overall increase. The number of traditional operating grants is not as promising, he said.

Langford also said that he is worried about FCAR competitions for research grants shifting from project or individual grants to team grants. "Concordia is not responding quickly enough to this," he said.

"The future is not very promising," the Vice-Rector continued. Funding from the major federal agencies (e.g., the NSERC) will be more selective.

Concordia is last on the list for external funding when compared with other major universities in Québec. UQAM has now surpassed Concordia's record, spending $1.8 million annually to develop a research profile whereas we spend only $440,000.

Nevertheless, a core of excellence exists at Concordia, with the University having 12% of elite researchers in the province, Langford concluded.

Patrick Kenniff responded to the report by saying that a complete review of seeding policies for research at Concordia will be undertaken to improve the opportunities. "The strength is there. We simply have to make sure it leads to results," he said.

Senator Tannis Arbuckle-Maag (Psychology) said recent contacts with the federal Social Science and Humanities Research Council (SSHRC) revealed a shift to team research and the likelihood that intermediate-level researchers will be cut off from future funding. SSHRC-funded research has not been developed at Concordia, she added.

Cooper Langford confirmed her impressions by saying that Concordia places between 18th and 20th in the country in terms of receiving SSHRC grants.

Vanier Library

The move to the new addition of the Vanier Library will take place after Fall semester exams are over to avoid disrupting students during this time of intensive library use, Rector and Vice-Chancellor Patrick Kenniff told Senate at last Friday's meeting.

As a result, students will continue to use the older part of the library until the holidays, and the contractor will have to wait until January to begin work there. The west-end library facilities, though currently awry, will ultimately feature a three-storey extension to and renovation of its Georges P. Vanier Library.

Kenniff expressed dissatisfaction with the delays encountered in the building of the Vanier addition and renovating the older part. Ceilings and walls are still being plastered, he said.

More details on this issue will appear in a future issue of TTR.

General News

Nine people have been elected by their respective senatorial constituencies and are to be members of the Advisory Search Committee to choose a successor to Vice-Rector, Academic, Francis Whyte, pending ratification by the Board of Governors. When passed, their names will be published in TTR.

A proposed code of conduct for undergraduate and graduate studies was presented to Senate at the same meeting and set aside for improvements. Several senators found weaknesses in the code and urged that it be referred to the Academic Programs Committee for more study and consultation.

Chairman Patrick Kenniff said the aim in defining a new code is to simplify rules and make them uniform at both the graduate and undergraduate levels. Once a new code is chosen, a handbook will be needed to serve as a guide in applying the code.

Despite several criticisms about the proposed composition of the Board of Graduate Studies, Senate approved the new composition. The board will have 39 members even though one of its aims in changing the composition was to have as small a board as possible.

Senate also approved a statement for the composition of the Council of the Faculty of Engineering and Computer Science.

Curriculum course changes in Physics and Leisure Studies were also approved after a discussion of the relationship between Leisure Studies and Exercise Science. The chair of the Department of Exercise Science was described as having concerns about the content of the new Leisure Studies program and the degree of autonomy of the program from the Exercise Science Department. Vice-Dean Dennis Dicks said that as far as Dean Charles Bertrand, who was absent, is concerned, the two units are autonomous. After Vice-Dean Gail Valaskakis pointed out that the curriculum changes could be made without formalizing the structural differences between the two units, Senate approved the changes.

Vice-Rector, Services, J. Charles Giguère told Senate that a written proposal on copyright policy has been received from the Secretary-General of the University. The policy will be discussed at the next meeting of the Academic Services Committee.

Members were appointed to several Senate committees.

"An outstanding contribution to the development of knowledge and culture..." – Claude Ryan

Excerpts from the comments made by Québec Higher Education and Science Minister Claude Ryan, and Concordia University Rector and Vice-Chancellor Patrick Kenniff, at the outdoor ground-breaking ceremony held November 4, 1988 for Concordia University's downtown library complex.

Québec Higher Education and Science Minister Claude Ryan was enthusiastic in his praise for Concordia at last Friday's ground-breaking ceremony for the downtown library complex.

First and foremost, he said he wanted to acknowledge Concordia's "remarkable contribution" in promoting "accessibility to higher education for the people of Québec."

The minister also cited Concordia's "remarkable contributions towards the development of several fields of knowledge." Amid cheers from the crowd, Ryan said that Concordia is at the forefront in many areas of knowledge.

With the University's senior administration looking on, the Higher Education Minister raised the thorny issue of Concordia's long struggle to obtain equitable funding. He conceded that "some inequities have crept in (to the funding system) over the years," but, he said "we're working hard to correct those inequities in close consultation with the rectors and principals of Québec universities."

Amid further cheers, Ryan added that "I am quite confident that before long we will come out with a funding formula which will be fair and equitable for all."

Noting the Québec government's $39 million contribution to the cost of library facilities on the downtown and west-end campuses, Ryan said that Concordia "will continue growing. It has a bright future in Montréal, and I wish to assure the leaders of the University that they can count on the support and sympathy of the government and population of Québec."

Ryan called the new library building a proud addition to the downtown area, and he noted that it would serve many generations of Québécois. He concluded by congratulating Concordia, once again, for "its outstanding contribution to the development of knowledge and culture — both in Montréal and the Province of Québec."

In his remarks, Concordia Rector and Vice-Chancellor Patrick Kenniff, speaking on behalf of the entire University, thanked all of those who had worked so tirelessly over many years to make the downtown library project possible — including those who raised money for it and those who helped to plan for it.

After acknowledging the support and collaboration of the Québec government and the City of Montréal, Kenniff spoke directly to Capital Campaign workers and donors, to faculty, to staff, to students and alumni.

"This project is yours," he said, "but it is also Montréal's and Québec's and Canada's. It is a project that belongs to the community because ours is a community-oriented university."

Tracing the long, difficult road leading to the ground-breaking, Kenniff said the idea for building a new library dated back long before the founding of Concordia, but plans began in earnest in 1980.

"I want to pay particular tribute at this time to the foresight of the people who were here then," the Rector said, "and particularly to my predecessor, John O'Brien, and to the Vice-Rector at the time, Graham Martin, who in those early years, against great odds and with no funding, began the thankless task of putting together the needs of the University and trying to address them."

Kenniff received a roar of approval from the onlookers when he said the new library complex will be "one of the finest and most interesting university buildings in Montréal."

"We don't have greenspace in downtown Montréal; so we're trying to recreate in this building an interior campus where students, faculty, staff and the general public can congregate for academic and social activities."

The Rector concluded by saying that "today is a day when we should all be very proud; more so than we usually are of this University and where it is going, and I am delighted and happy that you are all here to celebrate it."

With the digging out of the way, the nine-member official party posed for our TTR cameras in front of earth-moving equipment that was moved onto the library site the night before the sod-turning. From left to right are: Vice-Rector, Services, J. Charles Giguère; Board of Governors Chairman P. André Gervais; Québec Higher Education and Science Minister Claude Ryan; Rector and Vice-Chancellor Patrick Kenniff; Chancellor Alan B. Gold; Montréal City Councillor Hubert Simard (representing Mayor Jean Doré); Nick Auf der Maur, City Councillor for the downtown Peter McGill District; and Jacques Chagnon, MNA for the downtown St-Louis riding and Parliamentary Secretary to the President of the Treasury Board. Standing astride the back hoe (between Ryan and Kenniff) is Capital Campaign Chairman William W. Stinson, President and CEO of Canadian Pacific Limited.

An overview of the sod-turning site (as seen from the Bishop Court Building) following the departure of about 120 chanting ANEEQ (Association nationale des étudiants et étudiantes du Québec) demonstrators who tried to disrupt the ceremony to protest possible changes in government tuition loans and bursaries policies.

Following the outdoor activities, Chancellor Alan B. Gold delivered a toast to Concordia's success at a reception in the crowded lobby of the Henry F. Hall Building.

Shortly before the sod-turning, Rector Patrick Kenniff and Vice-Rector, Services, J. Charles Giguère signed the construction contracts for the new downtown library building. Seated beside the rector is Hervé Pomerleau, President of Hervé Pomerleau Inc., the general contracting firm for the project's first phase.

The night before the sod-turning, a "victory celebration" was held in the Henry F. Hall Building to mark the successful completion of Concordia's five-year $25 million Capital Campaign. Rector Patrick Kenniff presented a commemorative plaque to the Campaign's National Chairman, William W. (Bill) Stinson, President and CEO of Canadian Pacific Limited, as a gesture of thanks on Concordia's part for all of the tremendous work done by the Campaign volunteers.

Montréal Urban Community Police arrived en masse at the library site just before the sod-turning ceremony to set up barricades to keep protesting ANEEQ students at bay.

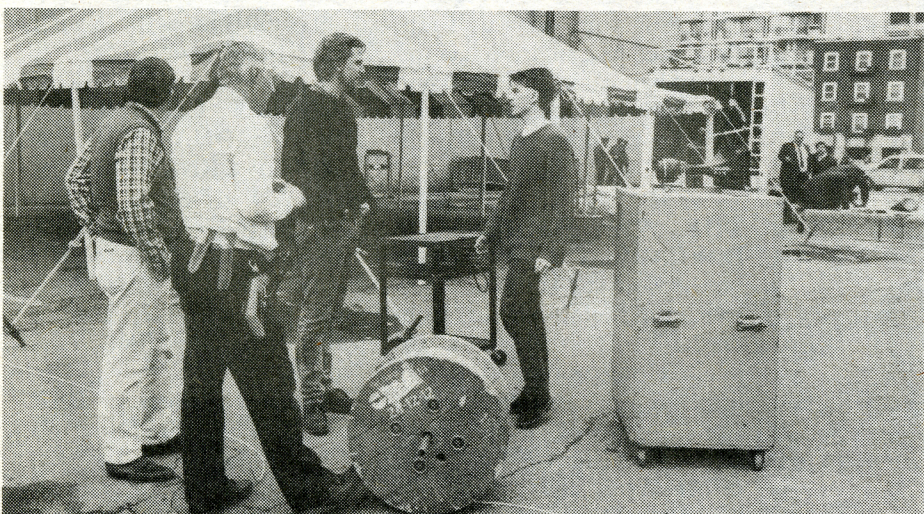

Reporter Ray Fichaud of CBMT-6 Newswatch was one of many T.V. and radio personalities on hand to interview Rector Kenniff about this red-letter day in Concordia's history.

Some of the many Garnet Key members on duty last Friday served as an honour guard for the ceremonial shovel that Québec Higher Education and Science Minister Claude Ryan used to turn the first sod. The same shovel was used at the May 9, 1986 ground-breaking ceremony for the $8.5 million renovation and expansion of the Loyola Campus' Georges P. Vanier Library.

Undeterred by ANEEQ protestors, Québec Higher Education and Science Minister Claude Ryan used the ground-breaking to praise Concordia for "its contributions to the development of knowledge and culture in Québec."

Audio-Visual Department Staffers Kevin Callaghan, Nick Ostopkevich, Mark Pounds and Sal Barrerra were among the hard-working team that helped prepare the library site for the elaborate sod-turning ceremony. The entire event was beamed live to TV monitors in the Hall Building.

To the Editor:

John Polanyi's talk on "The Responsibility of Scientists in an Age of Science" was delivered by an urbane, self-effacing Nobel Prize winner in Chemistry who uses his fame to call attention to matters such as the arms race and nuclear disarmament. The tenor of his argument was that the scientific community must recognize its responsibility for the technology which it produces; that science is not neutral and as a result there is a need for some form of ethics to guide research among the scientific community and monitor its application. The question raised by Dr. Polanyi was how can this be done? Can courses in ethics be added to the already overburdened curricula in science, engineering and medicine? How can the University develop an awareness of the social dimensions of science?

If a consensus emerged from the evening it was that these were important questions which need to be raised. However, for some of us in the audience the discussion seemed somewhat redundant. There is already a course in the Department of Philosophy on Biomedical Ethics; there are numerous courses at the Simone de Beauvoir Institute which offer a critique of the traditional scientific approach such as "Women, Science and Technology: Historical and Contemporary Perspectives," Women's Way of Knowing," and "Feminist Ethics." Moreover, at a time of worldwide concern over the ethics of the New Reproductive Technology, an international conference was held in October, 1987, by the Québec Council of the Status of Women with the collaboration of the Simone de Beauvoir Institute of Concordia University.

One might ask, then, was the administration's failure to inform Dr. Polanyi about the existence of these courses an oversight on his part or was it a symptom of the lack of awareness and even interest? Did it reflect the fact that many of these courses are the result of the personal initiative of concerned individuals rather than a coherent administrative policy? Indeed, these courses which are considered to be so important are often taught by part-time people to whom the University has little commitment in terms of job security. If Concordia is serious about examining the questions raised by the new technologies, then we would expect strong support for the work being done at the Simone de Beauvoir Institute. An Institute that functions without a single full-time tenure-track appointment is obviously not receiving this kind of backing from the Administration.

To the Editor:

In his story regarding the ground-breaking for the new downtown library complex (TTR, Nov. 3), Ken Whittingham erred in one regard. It is not "nearly 20 years after the idea was first proposed," but closer to 25 years. Even before the Henry F. Hall Building was completed, the library was on the books, and in fact in 1966-67, Professors Michael Brian, Henry Beissel and myself were on a committee to plan the English Department's facilities for the projected library, which it was assumed would be finished by 1970, if not sooner.

Unfortunately, the defeat of the Lesage Government in Québec set almost all education projects — and certainly our library — back. This lasted two full decades and more in our case while we limped along with the cramped and inadequate quarters in the Norris Building.

Part of the problem with the Hall Building, of course, is that it was planned to house Science and Engineering exclusively (that doesn't explain those escalators that have been malfunctioning for 22 years), because everything else would be housed in the library complex. Thank God we didn't hold our breath while we waited!
